Homemakers Items

Today's homemakers can take a leaf from the repair expert's notebook if she wants to save money on small jobs around the house.

Here are some tips to get you started on your career of home repairman:

Leaking pipes can often be repaired without taking the pipe apart, by smearing the joint with any of several prepared pipe cements, which cost very little at your local hardware store.

If your flourescent light gets dark on one end, reverse the tube. This may correct the fault.

To keep a crack from reopening when you patch plaster, first scrape the crack clean, then wet it thoroughly before you plaster. When dry, coat the patch with shellac.

Use modeling clay, in mending chinaware or glass, to hold chipped pieces together while the mending cement is hardening.

Doors drag? Try tightening the screws that hold the hinges in place. If they just won't tighten, fill the screw holes with plastic wood and try again when dry.

Silence floor squeaks by dusting talcum powder or dripping glue into the cracks.

Play safe — drive carefully.

About The Home

By Frances Dell

Almost every homemaker is called on to remove fruit and grass stains from the family's clothes during the summer.

The best way to remove recent fruit stains from washable clothes is to first soak the garment in cold water. Wash in warm suds and rinse well. For set stains on white cotton, linen and rayon, soak fifteen minutes in a bleach made from one tablespoon of household bleach to each quart of water, then rinse three times.

For white silk, wool, and all colored fabrics, soak thirty minutes in a solution of two tablespoons of hydrogen peroxide to each gallon of water, then rinse twice.

Grass stains on white fabrics which are washable can be removed by the method recommended for fruit stains. For colored fabrics use a bleach of one teaspoon of sodium perborate to one pint of hydrogen peroxide. Soak for thirty minutes and rinse three times.

To remove very stubborn stains you should sprinkle the stains with sodium perborate while the fabric is damp, let stand for thirty minutes. Rinse at least three times.

If a fruit stain is on a dry-cleanable fabric, sponge with cool water. The sooner you do this the more effective it will be. Next work in a good soapless shampoo. Let this stand for several hours. Test a drop of white vinegar on a section of the garment that does not show. If no color change is evident, apply a few drops to the stain and let stand for several minutes. Sponge clean with cool water.

To remove grass stains from dry-cleanable fabrics, sponge with a solution of one cup of denatured alcohol and two cups of water. Sponge clean with cool water.

WATER PROBLEMS CAN BE HELPED

Development of seeps or springs may help the water problem in rural areas.

Agricultural experts at VPI point out that drouth has caused severe wate rshortages in parts of Virginia the past few years.

Some farmers have turned to the development of springs or seeps and now have an adequate water supply where they formrly had a shortage.

The specialists say if you have an area that has a trickle of water as small as 2 quarts per minute, it can be harnesser, stored, and will supply enough water for 35 head of cattle. A swampy area in a field might supply enough water if it remains damp in dry weather

In some counties farm water supply developments are approved cost-sharing practices under the Agricultural Conservation Program.

The carpetbag is going strong as a new fashion trend. These bags are made of real carpet material in shaded floral patterns. The bag is as useful as a duffel bag and a good deal more attractive. A recent traveler to Europe carried a pair of shoes, a nightgown, a raincoat, a passport and money, a sweater and make-up in her carpetbag.

The average size is 17 inches long and 15 inches high with wide handles. It usually sells for about $49.50 plus tax. The small sizes, used for handbags only, measure about 14 inches long and 8½ inches high. They sell for $30 plus tax.

A perfect combination for a trip where you will be required to carry your own baggage or when you don't want to be weighed down with a lot of baggage, would be to use the large size carpetbag for the necessary clothes and the small sized bag for make-up and as your handbag.

The shape of fell hats will certainly be different. The ones we have seen have been dome-like and fashiond of fluffy mousses, long haired furs and shaggy textured fabrics. All look insatingly warm and are feathery light. Many roll up to pocket size.

Domes of nutria are dyed antique green and deep purple. Fox head-covering berets are tinted cinnamon and powder blue.

There are many round face-framing hats of mink, natural civet and lynx furs. One eye-catching number was a jungle wig of monkey fur. It takes real courage to wear a hat like this.

The evening hats will be tiny round disks of velvet. These disks are overlaid with jeweled birdcage veiling. The veils are separate coverings that can be worn on their own.

The man who squanders much of his money seldom stops to wonder why his wife tries to save spare pennies.

Hard work makes almost any job easy; backing off, and delaying the start, makes success almost impossible.

Often the tragedy of old age is inability to find a job to keep the individual occupied with a feeling he is needed in society.

HERE'S SCIENTIFIC DOPE ON FIREFLIES

One of the joys of childhood is chasing fireflies on long summer evenings.

Actually, say VPI entomologists, these little insects aren't flies. They are light-producing beetles.

Sometimes they're called lightning bugs or glow worms.

The insect first appears in numbers in June and continue to flash until early autumn. The most common light-producing species are distributed throughout the eastern United States south of the Great Lakes.

The flashing has intrigued scientists for many years. There is a theory that it is a mating response. Each specie has its own rhythm of flashing and an expert can identify the species by the length of the flashes and the interval between them.

In the tropics and the Orient the insects sometimes synchronize their flashes. This phenomenon — for which there is no known reason — was first observed by sailors with Columbus. In World War II, American GIs saw it in New Guinea.

The fireflies feed on snails and other small animals and insects. Recently an European species was imported into New Zealand to help in a campaign to control snails.

Light from the fireflies does not throw off heat. It is produced by the oxydization of a substance called luciferin, produced in the cells of the light organs of the insects. This substance can be extracted from dead fireflies and mixed with oxygen and it will produce light.

While most firefly chasers are content to imprison them in glass jars, the insects are used for decorative purposes in some tropical countries.

Appomattox is a growing town.
